ROBERT THE BEVIL.

This opera having been produced with considerable effect, at the Tremont Theatre, we thought that the truly German and horrible story upon which it was founded, might be interesting to our readers, and therefore extract the following graphic analysis of it from

"Robert is the son of a princess of Burgundy, who, being knighted, sets off in quest of adventures, accompanied by Bertram, who appears as his friend and brother in arms. Bertram is, in reality, a friend, and the father of Robert: he is permitted to wander on the earth for a certain number of years, at the expiration of which, if he cannot persuade some mortal to covenant his soul to the infernal povers, he is doomed to return to his torment. Robert his own son, is the individual whom he has fixed upon to substitute instead of

The music of the overcure is majestic, wild, and mournful; and the drop scene, which covers a stage large enough to contain almost any other theatre, represents a confused and frightful mass of precipitous rocks; a vast and impenetrable abyss yawns open in the midst, over which a dusky fiend hovers, with outspread dral of Palermo. Bertram meets Roberts there. wings. All seems to announce the sublime and awful scenes which are to ensue.

Robert has fallen desperately in love with the princess Isabella, of Sicily, who is to be the prize of the conqueror in a tournament about to be held at Palermo. The first scene represents a large number of knights, carousing in front of their tents, neart hecity, among whom are Robert and Bertram. A young girl is presently brought in by their pages, and is rescued from violence by Robert, who recognizes her as his adopted sister .-She has come to announce to him the death of his mother, and brings him a letter containing her last advice. He is overcome with affliction at the news, and cannot bear to read the letter, which he entreats his console him, and, under pretence of diverting his mind, engages him in gaming with the other knights. Robert loses, and Bertram advises him to double the stake :still he loses, and again doubles; the fiend is at his elelbow, and governs the chances, so that they are con-

Still encouraged to go on, he continues to lose-his bags of money, his ingots of gold, his jewels, the diamond chain about his neck, and finally, his horse and armor, and his golden-hilted sword, with the rich sheath. He is thus left destitute, and, instead of the wealthy knight, is an insignificant beggar. The fiend now expects to seduce him by the promise of wealth; but the princess, who is in love with him, provides him with a horse and armor, that he may fight for her.

Meantime, a different scene takes place. The stage represents a wild and mountainous country; on the right hand are seen the ruins of a classic temple; all appears desolate and lonely; and a rude cross, erected among the rocks, indicates that some hapless traveller has been murdered on the spot. The lover of Alice suppears, naving promised to meet her here; but Bertram presently comes in, and, wishing to be alone, persuades the young man to go to a distant part of the nountain, in the hope of finding a treasure. Bertram SHON, 6 Long wharf.

SHON, 6 Long wharf. appears, having promised to meet her here; but Bertomes to meet the spirits, with whom he is associated, and to do homage to the infernal king. He hears their thouts in the caverns under the earth, and they call appears amidst the ruins of the temple. In the meantime, Alice arrives, and is greatly disappointed at not finding her lover. All is stillness; she calls him by name, but no answer is returned; nothing is heard but ler own voice, long echoed among the means the me The sky now becomes overcast; the distant roar of the storm, and the low mutter of thunder are heard from mountain. Alice listens in dismay;

WINSLOW ON SOCIAL AND CIVIL DUTIES.—Christianity applied to our civil and social Relations—by Hubbard Winslow, Pastor of Bowdoin Street Church, Boston—for sale by MARSH, CAPEN & LYON, 133 sie is distressed at the absence of her lover, and frighteied at the loneliness and gloom of the place. While sle stands thus perplexed, the silence is broken by a shut from under the earth, so loud and terrific, that it seems as if all the spirits of darkness had been let lose. It is the rioting of the fiends, to whom Ber-tran has descended. No words can adequately describe this infernal music; it is a strange mixture of utter remorse and agony with wild and reckless joy.

A thousand voices appear to join in the frightful chorus, that they may dim the sense of wo, in the unconth riot. The awful sound is heard but a moment, and again all is silent. Alice is horror-struck, but can hardly believe her senses. Again the terrible chorus bersts forth from the earth, and she, all trembling, approaches the mouth of a cavern, in the ruins, whence the sound issues. At that moment, flames blaze forth, and Bertram rushes out, pale and terrified by the fury of his kindred spirits. Alice screams at the sight of him, and swoons at the foot of the cross. Bertram rouses her; he is now betrayed; she knows his true character. By threatening to destroy her lover, he obliges her to take an oath, not to reveal to Robert what she has seen. Meantime, Robert approaches; he has been defeated in the tournament by a friend, whom Bertram sent in the place of his rival, and is now in utter despair; he believes that his mistress is lost to him Bertram confronts him, and still promises him aid. He wishes to strengthen his power over him, by involving him in crime; for he has been told that, E. T. WETHERBEE'S variety store, bottom of Summer st. if he cannot induce Robert to sign the covenant before midnight, he must himself return to his sufferings.

the arches of which open in a roofless and ruinous church, which is filled with graves. Various tombs are seen in the cloister. Their form, according to the fashion of the times, is square; and on a slab, raised two or three feet from the ground, reposes a marble statute of the person buried, shrouded in the graveclothes, the hands folded in prayer; on one of these, is the statute of St. Rosalia, bearing in the hand a magic branch. It is night, and the soft light of the moon is poured on the broken walls and columns of the church, and streams through the arches of the cloister. Heavy denunciations are pronounced against the sacrilegious person who shall pluck the branch from the hand of the saint. Bertram, therefore, wishes to make Robert to do it. He has already told him, that the possession of the branch will ensure him success; and he is now going to summon the spirits of the nuns from purgatory, that they may persuade Robert to commit the crime. Bertram appears at the extreme end of the cloister; the music is slow, soft, and very solemn, and the trumpet is heard summoning the spirits from their is heard summoning the spirits from their Bertram appears at the extreme end of the cloister :

sheets, step from their resting-place-at first, almost inanimate, as awaking from the slumber of ages, then becoming more instinct with life, and finally advancing, with slow and measured step, towards the master-spirit who has awakened them. Still the trumpet pours forth its solemn notes, and hosts of spirits come flitting through the arches; every grave yields up its tenant, and all bow before the enchanter and receive his com-

The slow and solemn music is now changed to a livelier strain; the nuns fling off their shrouds and appear as beautiful girls. Some of them set up an altar to their master, and offer incense to him; others, in reckless mirth, throw dice, and gamble in their own tombs. Robert appears in the midst, and a bevy of the ninth volume, 112th page, of the New England them dance round him, lead him to the tomb of St. Rosalia, and endeavor to persuade him to pluck the branch. He starts-for the statue reminds him of his mother; he is horror-struck, and retires from the tomb; but the false spirits again gather round him, and lead him towards it, till at length, overcome by their blandishments, and blinded by passion, he plucks the branch. At that moment, the wild shout of the demons is heard, with the clanking of chains, and the nuns sink lifeless into their graves, above which the most hideous monsters hover, and seem to exult over their victims. Robert has now possession of the branch, and bears it into the court of Sicily, where the king, with all his nobles, himself in his infernal abode; and the play turns up on and the rival of Robert, are assembled. He waves the his attempts to induce Robert to make a covenant with branch over them, and all, save the princess, fall into a magic sleep, from which they can only be awakened by his breaking the branch. The princess persuades him to do this, for she will never be won by such arts; in despair he breaks it, and the sleepers are roused from their lethargy.

The next scene represents the vestibule of the cathe-The hour of midnight is approaching, and he knows, that if the league is not signed before that, his doom is sealed. He promises wealth, power, honor, every-thing, if he will but comply. Robert is almost persuaded, when a strain of soft and delicious music comes stealing on his ear, and seems to recall him to virtue. It is the organ of the cathedral, and the vesper-chant.-Again Bertram renews his agonized entreaties; he reveals the sacred name of father; he kneels, he weeps, he drags his victim away from the influence of the holy music. At this moment, Alice rushes in-she implores Robert to read his mother's letter before he yields-he is hardly willing, but at length complies with her entreaties. He there reads, that Bertram is a fiend, who sister, Alice, to preserve for him. Bertram tries to had ruined her, and who is plotting his own destruction. He is saved-the cathedral bell is heard slowly tolling twelve, and Bertram sinks into the yawning earth in a shroud of fire.

At the close of this act, the drop-scene indicates that the frightful passages are terminated. It represents the Holy City, in all its gorgeous magnificence, with palace and tower, church and square, and lengthened colonades, stretching away as far as the eye can reach. A rainbow spans it, from the right hand to the left, with its glittering arch, on whose summit stands the angel of mercy, crowned with a diadem of stars. The closing scene represents the wedding procession. The story of Robert's temptation and dangers has reached the king, and he has betrothed his daughter to him. The gorgeous train is seen entering the cathedral—a thousand wax-lights shed their glare upon the scene—boys, in robes of white, are swinging their censers, from which rises the smoke of incense; and the loud organ is heard, with the full choir chanting hyms of praise for victory over the wiles of the enemy.'

THIS DAY PUBLISHED, and for sale at the Counting Room of the Morning Post, No 19 Water street, the TRIAL OF BEALS AND GREENE or an alleged Libel upon ALFRED W. PIKE.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS. Washington Dec. 9th, 1835.

On the mustering of Congress to-day, they immediately adjourned to attend the funeral of Judge Smith, which took place from the Senate Chamber, where the members of the House repaired after the adjournment of the Senate.

The Rev. Mr Higby, of the Episcopal Church of this city, to which denomination the deceased belonged, officiated on the oceasion; and delivered a very impressive, appropriate, and eloquent sermon. He went briefly into the evidence of the Christian faith, and the hopes it held out of a happier existence. But to the human mind, human evidence, in human language, is but unsatisfactory evidence at best, when it comes from human lips; it is written on the heart by no human hands and comes in a still, small voice to the conscience from no human lips, and is unheard by human ears .-Religion is neither an art nor a science, to be taught or demonstrated; it must be felt, to be acknowledged; and cherished, to be effectual.

The speaker did not paint death as the king of terrors, but rather as a messenger of peace, a herald of salvation,-summoning the deceased, indeed, suddenly, from his earthly labors, but finding him not unprepared for the great and important change from time for eternity. He appealed in a solemn manner to his audience, asking whether they were as well prepared as the deceased to hear the midnight summons, warning them at a moment's notice to another world?

I have rarely heard a discourse that produced deeper solemnity on any occasion, or on any audience.

The President, looking in fine health, and walking with a firm, elastic step, was present on the occasion, accompanied by all his cabinet. The accommodation in the gallery allowed but a small audience, principally ladies. The concourse on the east front of the Capitol, when the procession rode off, was quite large. The day was rather cold, and disagreeably dusty, causing the crowd to be much less than on similar occasions.

REIS EFFENDI.

Washington, December 10, 1835.

I am happy to learn to-day, that hopes are entertained of Senator Kane's recovery. His malady is a bilious fever; which, I learn, has attacked many residents of Illinois, after their arrival here, though they entirely escape it there. This city seems to be a congenial climate for ripening the seeds of disease, as well as a severe ordeal to test integrity and talents. Here many have found a grave, and some-a gibbet.

As an item among the news of the day, I ough to have mentioned that the Locomotive, bearing the Message, went so fast as to extinguish her fire ! and yet reached Baltimore with the aid of horses, in about an hour beyond the allotted time! "Nobody was in fault," as they say when a sloop is blown up with simple "saltpetre !"

Mr Calhoun, says one whig paper of the city, was upset on his way nitner, and seriously, not dangerously, hurt. Another whig print, I understand, upsets the Really, facts assume such varying hues when they reach this goodly city, that I would as soon swear to the color of a chamelion's skin, a pigeon's neck, or peacock's tail! If a man in good faith means to shoot you, and twice misses fire, he is considered insane ! though for all I can see, it were quite as rational to consider the intellects of the fire-arms disordered. Or if a man happens to come to the aid of his country in her hour of need, forsoth, he is branded as a deserter from his party! ("Which party, Bezonian?") and denounced as a traitor-to the factious foes of his country ;-a traitor to treason! Commend me ever to all

The House were engaged in a very interesting debate to-day, on the adoption of their Standing Rules, principally on the amendment of Mr Adams, (to follow the 57th) which was carried, after a long and desultory discussion, by a vote of 91 to 76.

Before Mr Adams called up his amendment, he moved to have a standing committee appointed on the Milita, (to follow in order after the Military Committee) which was carried. He then offered an amendment to his former one, making it the 58th Rule, and specifying the objects of appropriation, such as the Army, Navy, Indian Bill, &c. He said his object was to accelerate the passage of the appropriation bills; and every one must be aware of its importance and necessity. That it had been the practice to introduce new legislation into these Bills, for various purposes, which had been a fruitful source of debate and tardiness between both

But space does not allow me to follow him in his argument. I may pursue it to-morrow at my leisure, as the House has adjourned to Monday, to allow time for the appointment of the standing committees.

Mr Cambreleng, followed by Mr Vanderpool, rather opposed Mr Adams's course; to whom he replied, that he had expected, and did now expect, to receive their aid, instead of their opposition.

Judge Sutherland supported the amendment; Mr Mercer opposed it ; Mr Everett offered an amendment, making the discussion of the appropriation bills take precedence of all others of a public nature. Mr Adams accepted it, and replied to Mr Mercer. Mr Williams, of North Carolina, gave a side wind to the amendment, which Mr A. took out of his sail; and the gentleman hauled down his colors, put up helm, and drew off to repair damages.

Mr Wise said he should go for the amendment; but to my mind he said some things that did not support it altogether. His speech was like the Roman poet's beauty, "remarkable for a fine eye, with a very ugly REIS EFFENDI.

over to Monday. The Report of the Secretary of the Treasury is a very long, able, and interesting document, which we shall publish at length in the Post, commencing, probably, on Wednesday. It is estimated that the available funds in the Treasury, on the first of January next, will amount to $18,047,598; upon this amount, however, are charged by law various expenditures, altogether amounting to about $7,595,574, leaving the sum of about $10,450,024, to be applied by Congress. The estimated receipts from all sources for 1836, are $19,-750,000; which, with the balance remaining this year, will made $37,797,598. The expenditures of every kind for 1836-including previous appropriations, and the sum of $3,326,825 for extraordinary expenses connected with the military and naval services, and all new appropriations-is estimated at $23,133,640. The expenditures will in the ensuing year, for only the objects specified in the estimates, prebably exceed the receipts in that year about four millions of dollars, and thus, to that extent, reduce the balance now on hand.

A Store Breaker Caught .- Four times within the past three months the Grocery store of Mr J. W. Carter, in Broomfield street, has been broken into in the night time, and what little change that may have been left in the drawer, stolen. On Friday night, the persons left in the store as a watch, were apprised of a visitor by the breaking of a pane of glass, and kept quiet till Mr Stephen Andrews effected a lodgment within the store. They then pounced upon him, but he showed fight, and succeeded in getting back into the yard, where he was mastered by the help of some citizens, and delivered over to the watch, to whom he submitted without further resistance. At the watch-house, he confessed to Constable Stockland that the store as a watch, were apprised of a pane of glass, and kept liminary, so that the jury may understand the rights of the story. Well, I'm only mentioning these things as a sort of presently—I'm only mentioning these things as a sort o sons left in the store as a watch, were apprised of a he confessed to Constable Stoddard, that he entered Mr Carter's store about a fortnight before, but only found about twenty-five cents. On the way to the jail, he confessed to watchman Hubbard, that he had entered Mr Carter's store about two months ago also. Committed for trial at the Municipal Court. He is about 20 years of age.

MUNICIPAL COURT.

Thomas Bullow-was the name of a most purple-visaged criminal, whose countenance were the complexion, and possessed nearly as much beauty as a parboiled bullock's liver. This pink of the term, or pride of the thief-dock, was charged with stealing a hand-cart, from Spring lane, one night in June. Territory.) were received from the President, and last. The day after the theft, Bullow entered his family several reports, ordered by the last Congress, from the homestead, in Newton, and astonished its assembled inmates -his relations by blood and matrimony-by saving to them-"Good morning to ye all; Come out and look at my team." sented the credentials of the newly elected Senators Expecting to see something wonderful, in the way of horsefrom Michigan, and moved that seats be assigned for flesh, out they all rushed, and there beheld an old hand-cart, them until the admission of Michigan was decided on containing an assorted cargo of old bottles, paint-pots, hoes, and shingles. He speedily distributed around these duriosities to his eager friends, as affectionate gifts. To his mother he presented a couple of hoes; to his sisters, the paint-pots, and business, and when the doors were opened, adjourned gave the bottles to his brother-in-law; and, as a most especial souvenir, he presented the hand-cart to his young nephew Frederick. "Whose cart ye got; Wher'd ye get him, Uncle," said Fred. "No matter whar I got him, or whose it is :-it's your's now, for I give it to you," said his honest and generous uncle Tom, who at the same time tore off a tell-tale tin plate tacked to the bottom of the cart, and having inscribed thereon the names of "Knotts & Richards." The cart was immediately ordered on to field-duty, under the command o. young Fred, till, in the course of time, its rightful owner as certained where it was. Young Fred was then deprived or his no-horse "team," and his good-natured present-making uncle Tom was "incarcerated"-that is, jugged-nabbedcribbed, or limbo'd .- When Tom's trial came on, his brotherin-law and nephew, the recipients of his bounty, were the principal witnesses against him, and at the conclusion of the testimony of the latter, he was informed by the Court that the time had come for him to speak a few words for himself.

Tom-I'm much obliged to your honor-I sent a friend in the morning to find the man that saw me buy the cart, and when he finds him, he will no doubt bring into court with all possible expedition, because he knows it is very material for ne just at this time. But in the meanwhile that my friend is looking for the witness, I'll just give you a sort of a history how I come by the cart, and I have no doubt that I shall be able to make it appear quite natural.

Court—Well, proceed; but it will be no use to state any fact that you cannot prove. If you can say anything that will serve to explain away the facts proved against you, it will be very well.

Tom—I shant say nothing I cant prove—You know I've been to work in our farm, and was never suspected of anything of this kind before—though I've had the handling of a good deal of change, when I did the marketing. I've been to work on the farm all the last summer, and did every clip of the mowing, except what my nevvy, and an old man did, which warnt much, you may well suppose—

Court-There must be an end of this business-You cannot proceed any further unless you come at once to the cart.

Tom—The fact is, yer honor—I'm expecting the witness in every moment, and I thought you'd rather hear about the cart from him; and in the meantime while the court is waiting, I thought I'd jest fill up the time, by preparing the minds of the jury for what is coming.

County Att.—That is just what I suspected, your honor—he only wants to gain time; and I would rather, the Court would grant him time to procure his witness, and go on with another Tom-I should be very sorry to interrupt the business of the a critical condition, and I wish to explain it.

Court—That is the very thing we want.

Tom—I thought the jury would like to hear what I did do, and then they would be able to decide if it is at all likely that such a man as me, having debts to collect, could be guilty of stealing a hand-cart. Bless me, why dont that man bring along that witness. He must know that he is almighty important tome jest at this time; the time's a going off rapidly, and the Court—No matter where you was—the cart is all we want.

Tom—Exactly—I agree with your honor, but we can only

Tom-Exactly—I agree with your honor, but we can only get at it by degrees. Well, as I was going up Washington street, I met a girl, or rather a young woman, I should think, that used to live with my mother once—I axe'd her wher'd she been to, and she made answer that she'd jest come from said so, although she used to have spats once in a while with her. Mother used to think she was kind a giddy, and would have more to say to the men than was necessary sometimes, but I never saw no hurt in her, though to be sure her man-ners were what you might call free, and not quite so pleasant to some folks as to others that warnt so particular. Well I had'nt seen her for a long time, and I thought I'd go to Roxbury with her, and going along till we got on to the Neck, we saw three Irishmen round this here cart, by the fence, with clams in it, and one of the men called to me by name, and said he know'd me—I suppose he did, for he might have seen me when I used to bring my marketing into Broad street to Court-Never mind Broad street-the cart. Court—Never mind Broad street—the cart.

Tom—Where can that witness be—the cart? Where did I leave it? Oh, at the fence?—Yes, I had the cart up against the fence. The Irishman who called me by name, said to me the leace. The Irishman who called me by name, said to me —"Do you see this old cart—I've been dragging it all over the city from day to day and can't get a living by it—I should like to sell it to you, and then I'll try to get work on the railroad." Says I to him—'It's an old consarn"—for it was naterl to beat him down a little—"What'll you sell her for-nine shillings?" said 1—"Nine shillings," replied Pat—"Its a con shiftings?" said I—"Ane shiftings," replied Pat—"Its a convanient article, and you shall have it for a thrifte—say ten dollars," he added. "I bought a four wheel wagon for less than that last week," said I; "but I'll give you five dollars, since you seem to know me, said I. "Its a bargain," said he, "if you plank the cash."—I paid him the five dollars on the spot. I gave him a three dollar bill of the all Prichton Pearls and gave him a three dollar bill of the old Brighton Bank. two dollar bill of the Farmer's and Exchange Bank, which my mother give me seven years ago. When my ma'rm gi'en it to me, she said to me—"Thomas, take this bill, and as long, as you keep it you will always have meney about you." Well, I did keep it, for I never had a chance to pass it traded for the cart. It makes me feel bad whenever I think about that bill—I never used to take it out without thinking of my mother-Poor old lady, she has seen a good deal of that you was acquainted with him—and I'm afraid my present difficulty will be too much for her-

Court -- The cart -- the cart. Tom—I was coming right round to the cart, but thinking of the death of my brother led my mind away from the subject— Well long towards night I saw a neighbor with his wagon, and axed him what he'd tax me to drag my cart. He said he'd tax me a quarter, and I agreed to give—

Court—Now then you have got to the cart, prisoner, and— Tom—Yes, but I aint got it home yet. I agreed to give him the quarter, provided he'd take me along too, and so we—

Court—Prisoner, we must put a stop—

Tom—'Most got the cart home, yer honor. So about 11 at night we got home with it, and then I tried the door of the house and found it shot, and as my mother is a very feeble old woman I thought it would not disturb her by knocking and so went to the barn, where the old man that used to work a the farm slept—
Court—You have lost sight of the cart again.

Tom-No I sint-I shall be down on the cart again in minute-I was at the barn door, I believe, warnt I. Well, got in, and creeping round by the old man, I waked him—he readfully plagued with the rheumatism, and you never see'd any cretur wake so quick—and says he to me—

Court—We dont want to hear what the old man said.—

You have told how you got by the cart—now have you got any body here that can prove it, by swearing to it.

Tom—Well the fact is, I expected a witness here, but he dont seem to come—I'm afraid the man I sent for him can't find him, and I suppose we shall have to finish the case as well as we can without him.

Mr. Greene,-Having read in the "Post" inst before the Election for State Officers some questions relative to Mr. Frederick Emerson, whether he were one and the same individual who represented such a variety of political interests, I send you the following answers to JANUS.

In the year 1833, Mr. Frederick Emerson was elected by somebody as a school-committee man to represent Ward 7. During the same year, three Arithmetic's bearing his name as the author were introduced into the Public Schools; a pretty good compensation to Mr. Emerson for his services. In the year 1834, Mr. Esq. In Portland, by Rev Mr Vail, Mr Ezra Harford to Miss Journal W. Delawar. sent Ward 7. During the same year, three Arithme-Frederick Emerson was proposed for the Whig Ticket, and was rejected: at the same time the name of Mr. Frederick Emerson appeared on the counterfeit Whig Ticket; on the Jackson Ticket; on the Anti-Masonic Ticket, and on the Workingmen's Ticket. In the year 1835, the name of Mr. Frederick Emerson appeared on the Whig Ticket, and the same name was proposed for the Anti-Masonic Ticket, and likewise for the Free-Bridge Ticket. This gentleman is undoubtedly, like Noah Webster, a man of Parts; but were it not for interested Book-sellers, and the Writing-Masters of the Public Schools, grateful for services rendered during the year he was a member of the School-Committee, it is feared that he would never have been thought of for the Legislature, or the board of School Committee. Inhabitants of Ward 5, look to the interests of your children and choose proper men to represent you.

Mr. Taney .- No man, we belive, ever had more falsehoods invented and propagated against him in a short space of time, than Mr. Taney has had since he removed the Deposits. It would seem that persons must be regularly employed for that purpose-for as soon as one slander is put down, another is invented. The Boston Atlas has within a few days past added another item to the list. It says that "Mr. Taney's favorite toast in the war of 1812, was 'Federalism of the Boston stamp;" and this new charge is, as a matter of course, transferred to the columns of the paper in this city owned by the Bank, and published by their agents, Messrs. Gales and Seaton. Now, it is per- which feetly well known in Maryland that Mr. Taney gave Spoke no such toast, nor any toast like it-and that, on the contrary, he was openly and decidedly opposed to the course pursued by the Boston Federalists, and Hartford Convention men, during the last war, and that his opposition brought upon him the bitter and violent denunciations of that class of politicians; and no one knows this better than Gales and Seaton, although they have endorsed the story of the Boston Atlas .- Globe.

The first Duel in the U. States .- The first duel in the United States happened in New England, in the year 1681. About a year after the settlement of the Northern States, 2 servants, urged by a mutual spirit of animosity, determined to put an end to their quarrel, by what in France and England was termed the mode honourable, the duel; they appointed a place of meeting to which they both repaired. They fought with great fury, but after a while left the field of battle. without either having experienced the slightest scratch. The Puritans, whose wisdom and religious scruples are well known, caused them to be arrested, and to punish them for a conduct which they so criminal and so opposed to public quiet, -condemned them to be bound together, hand and foot for twenty four hours, without either food or drink .- Bugara's Translator.

Accident to the Dead .- As an undertaker was yesterday removing the corpse of a negro female in a light waggon to a house in Laurens street, where it was to remain until interment, the horse, when at the corner of Franklin street, took fright and ran away at a tremendous pace, upsetting the vehicle and its unconscious burthen, which was thrown spralling on the pavemen. to the great consternation and alarm of a number of passers-by. The poor undertaker was at one time in some danger of being made a subject for the Law Lynch in consequence of being suspected as a resurrec-LAUNDRY respectfully informs the citizens of Bonumor, however, were manifested by the sovereign trinumor, however, were manifested by the solve. As in all cases, so especially in this, Venders, if they wish to secure the patronage of the public, should be extremely caus tious not to seil an article for the Hair which tends to counter act rather than assist nature,

The virtues of Bear's Oil have been too long tested to need ary eulogium; and at this time no one can doubt of its being the very best article for strengthening and promoting the growth of the Hair. An honest prejudice against the use of Bear's Oil has long existed, arising from two causes—the improper method of purifying it, and the imposition upon the public of a spurious article. That this prejudice may be whole ly removed, this article now offered is warranted the pure Oil, rendered more pleasant by the addition of a little perfume—and the possibility of its injuring the Hair is entirely precluded by the manner in which it has been purified. To prevent fraud, the genuine is enclosed in two wrappers, the inside one being

R. PHELPS' ARCANUM.—This Syrup is cele brated for the Cure of Scrofula, Ecuptions or Diseases of the skin, Syphilis or Venereal Complaints, Rheumatism, Ulcers in the Throat and other parts of the Body, Mercurial Affections, Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Blood, Deepseated pains in the Muscles, Bones, &c. and a regenerator of emaciated and broken Constitutions, caused by disease, intemretance, &c.
RECOMMENDATIONS.

Having been made acquainted with the medical qualities and witnessed the effects of "Dr Phelps" Arcanum," I feel much confidence in saying it is a preparation of medicine greatly superior to any thing of the kind, in curing those chronic discases for which it is intended, and recommend it to invalids in preference to any other article whatever.

New York, March 25, 1830.

My knowledge of the properties and operation of the "Arcanum of Dr Phelps," justify me in saying that it is far superior to any depurative syrup with which I am acquainted. In the most obstinate and ambiguous deseases, it displays effects peculiarly surprising. In those affections that resist the skill of the physician, such as Rheumatism, Syphilis, Scrofula, Ulcerations, and Diseases of the Skin, &c., I would recommend it as worthy of great confidence.

Philadelphia, Nov. 27, 1829.

Philadelphia, Nov. 27, 1829. For the last few years I have suffered excessively by a Billious Mercurial Disease, which has rendered me frequently unne for duty, and confined me as often to my berth. My diease was the sequela of bad treatment, while in the more tropical latitudes, and laboring under an acute inflation of the liver, and other Billiary organs. Prior and pube equently to our arrival in this port, I have had recourse to a great variation of the liver. ety of prescriptions, medicines and nostrums-amo were a number of bottles of Swaim's Panacea, Pott e's Catholicon, the Rob of Laffecteur, &c., but without any benefit — br Phelps being at that time a student of medicine in the University of Pennsylyania, advised me to make use of a newly discovered medicine, the Arcanum, which he believed would succeed in relieving me, in consequence of the very signal effects himself and others had observed in its operation in various glandular diseases, that were otherwise considered incurable. I commenced its use accordingly, and it affords me pleasure to thanks to his old patrons for their liberal favors; and to exstate, that for several months past, not a vestige of the original or secondary disease has been discoverable. I prize the medicine above all others with which I have ever been acquainted. It is both pleasant and I believe certain it its effects, as a remedy in a variety of chronic diseases, incident to tropical and other climates.

SAVANNAH, 6th March, 1831.

Gent.—I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude to you in offering me a boutle of Dr Phelps' Arcanum, as an experiment in my case of Rheumatism. I have been dreadfully afflicted for upwards of twelve months, and for the last four or five months have scarcely been able to walk. I have used a dozen bottles of Swaim's Panacea, and found very little benefit from it. After taking the bottle of Arcanum, I found such a change in my whole system, that I was induced to try another, and to my surprise, the pains in my legs all disappeared, and the Ulcers in one have completely healed up, and I can walk nearly as well as ever. I shall continue to take two bottles more, and firmly believe it will make a complete cure of my disease.

I remain, gentlemen, yours very respectfully, JNO. MORRALL.

Extract of a letter from Dr Jones, a highly respectable physician, dated Baton Rogue, Louisiana, Dec. 28, 1833.—
The Arcanum had two powerful competitors, Swaim's Panacea, and Potter's Catholicon, which have been for years in circulation in this place. As far as I have had an opportunity of ascertaining its virtues, I believe the Arcanum to be superior to any article of the kind, yet offered to the public. 1 prescribed it in a case of Irritable Ulcer of three years standing, situated on the Malleolus Extrenus—the individual thus afflicted was much emaciated and debilitated,—after one week's afflicted was much emaciated and debilitated,—after one week's attendance, I put him upon the Arcanum, following the directions three bottles nearly effected a cure of the ulcer and bod-

I prescribed it in several Mercurial and Syphilitic Affec tions, where it proved salutary. I am at this time trying the Arcanam on an individual, who has been laboring under Ulcerous affections of one of his legs, for fifteen years,—he has taken I bottle only, and it has produced that effect, he is sanguine in the belief, it will effect a permanent cure.

I EW ENGLAND CROWN GLASS.—The New England Crown Glass Company have recently erected a new furnace and are manufacturing an excellent article. Their Crown Glass is thick, pure and of excellent color. Its thick-pure greatly appropried to the control of the color of ness gives it an advantage over all thin glass, which is liable to crack from contraction in cold weather. Its surface not being polished after being blown, retains its enamel, brilliancy and hardness, and is not liable to the objection which applies the Almond with the detergency of the common Alkaline Soap.

Chapped Hands.—Camphor Soap—J. & E. E. A. recommend this Soap as containing a greater quantity of Camphor than has hitherto been considered practicable. It possesses all the cooling and other good qualities of that well known article.

For Family Use—Atkinson's old brown Windsor Soap.

Ambrosial Soap—It is made from pure vegetable oil, and is equally mild as the almond, only differing from it in perfume and color—the latter being a light brown, and the perfume a combination of those most generally approved.

The New England Crown Glass being purer in color than any other Glass, is preferable for Stores, as it does not time the rays of light as they pass through it, and therefore white goods particularly appear to advantage; and it is peculiarly useful for Factories, as some minutes of light may be gained morning and evening, in consequence of the absence of color in this glass. The price of second quality is reduced from the rates heretofore asked.
